THE BUSINESS SITUATION.

The people of Chicago and the Northwest generally have borne an important part in the recent speculations of Wall street and have unquestionably made a good deal of money. It is common for the great crowd of outsiders to join in a rising market and lose in a falling market, and it is a well-known axiom of the manipulators to keep dealing in the middle element all they can for the bulk of the securities and then force in a drop which is very disastrous to the latter. There has not been recently any phenomena in the markets with which the brokers of the metropolis seemed more familiar and which is more disastrous to the public. There has not been recently any phenomena in the markets with which the brokers of the metropolis seemed more familiar and which is more disastrous to the public. There has not been recently any phenomena in the markets with which the brokers of the metropolis seemed more familiar and which is more disastrous to the public.

The bulkings of stocks in this city have been greatly reduced within the last fortnight, and the tendency is still to sell. A majority of the brokers of New York who went Republican in this city say that the tendency is toward, that there is still great profit in buying. But if New York believe this, as New Yorkers say they do, Chicago has done well thus far and the effort to bring it profits and stay out of the market in the present. The stripes too have begun, and there is no guarantee of a further advance commensurate with the risk. It is to be hoped that there is no force operating on the business like the tremendous influence of the revaluation of cards succeeds in 1892. The country will not be ruined. And the speculating is for the most part in the so-called dealing-cards. Those magnificent developments of the West that have just developed through the fall them are not touched. The Duggenheim of the New York Central is not touched. Chicago and New England a large quantity of stock is not touched, and the transaction has been very costly and to the individual. It is probably enough that the prices of stocks may be lifted a little more, but it is evident to anybody that the course of the people has already been discounted.

The course of general business is such as to confirm the views of those who believe that the season has turned in the opening of the present year. There is now very little in the outlook of an unfavorable character barring the contemplation of the silver question. The improvement in the cotton situation is quite marked, and it seems to be a reasonable one to price. There is every prospect of a large crop of cotton, and the material for the manufacture of dry goods will probably be cheap. It is noted, too, as a point in favor of the magnitude of cotton-mills that have been in operation in Canada from the mill towns of New England (many of them Canadian), and that is thought to give promise of better wages for those who are left. There is little or no abatement of the demand for wool, and the only to that line of industry are doing very well. As for iron, there is an actual rise in the price of steel rails, and the rest of the market is strong in comparison with its condition a few months ago. All advices in regard to trade from all parts of the country are favorable. The Pittsburg manufacturers, who are putting some orders, and some of the mills are running double time. If the coal dust case the last fear can be said to be at all generally getting an event. The improvement is shown by the weekly rate of the Baltimore association to advance the prices of the Minneapolis 1st 2s and 1,000 bags. The feeling in the South is very buoyant, and an unusual number of enterprises are now getting a start. There are now later reports of much improvement across from the Gulf-to-Lakes roads, which have not yet developed into a general outbreak.

The money market is in a healthy condition. There has been a constant reduction in the excessive reserves of the New York banks for several weeks and rates are stronger. The quantity of capital seeking profitable use is, however, so great that it will take a good while to restore the market to a basis satisfactory to lenders. And it is not probable that it will ever get back to the rates of 1879-'81 the country over. The London market responds to ours. Large loans gave up materially there, and a further rise is expected on account of the demand for the movement of the crops and the foreign loans.

THE LIQUOR PROHIBITION FIGHT.

Notwithstanding the plan and the activities of the "security" demonstrations in London Saturday it is doubtful whether it will meet in any good result. On the contrary, it may have evil effect, as the Duke of Wellington and the politicians of Central Party point out, in increasing and stimulating political activity. Popular demonstrations in England have little effect unless they take place immediately before or during a session of Parliament. Every minute in London has to be accomplished by legislation. Temperance crusades in behalf of three hundred years for instance there. The anti-Chinese agitation, the cattle-lease plan, the Star of Hope lands, and even the Salvation Army have benefited but more every within have to most instances been used by Confounds and clergymen as a means of raising money.

The agitation begun by the Pall Mall Gazette was accomplished at that was urged for by Mr. Thorogood. A opportunity studied as it was, the Criminal Law Reform Bill was amended in several important particulars, notwithstanding the opposition of parliamentary prodigies. The right of wards to personal liberty has now been established, and the age limit has been extended to 19 years. This was all that Mr. Stead demanded. He ought to rest on his laurels. He says that the people of London are not the proper of the Chinese and opposition which have been of no being carried on to their relief will hardly hold water. They have been informed about them not only by our evening newspapers, but by hundreds of thousands of pamphlets now on widely distributed that they have been declared to be a public nuisance.

The Bill A want Mr. Stead's crusade of the pamphlets previous out of it to order London people have of the Chinese who interested in their spoils. Innumerable pamphlets, newspapering, publishers, and tracts have been published during the week; numbers of the English Capital. While the ordinary read the callings of Baldwin Arnold and other members and of nearly all the London editors against the vices and attacks of Paris, they must know that greater darkness are practiced among themselves. Who that knows Hebrew do not, while reading in the Pall Mall Gazette of began "Slaves of Rome," gathering about to notice Gazette took place, result that publicity attempt to attack Mr. Haggerty relative to David Coppersmith and the good work, Baby Thurlow, the story of Little Emily on her return to London after her betrayal by Heartless?

I must say pursuit of the typical case of an abducted girl is not the only temptation to which the publication of the Pall Mall Gazette is open. Another danger is that of a fine, which a crime of a fine, which a crime of a fine, which a crime

He had a long conference today with Mr. Timothy Harrington, Secretary of the Irish National League, Mr. William O'Brien, editor of United Ireland, and other leaders of the Nationalist party. There are symptoms of unrest in some of the counties over the payment of the Irish members of the next Parliament. Mr. Parnell thinks that such assistance shall be contributed to pay the only members who have no means to live in London. The decision practically recognizes the justice of payment for the members, so as to secure the services of able men who could not otherwise afford to devote themselves to politics. But some of the more conservative object to having the fund for the support of their members directly entrusted into Mr. Parnell's hands. They want a general fund created to which they will subscribe, and which will be administered by a committee, and [illegible] to the [illegible] Mr. Parnell [illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] Parliament [illegible] Mr. Parnell [illegible] Mr. Gladstone [illegible] Mr. Parnell [illegible] Mr. Gladstone [illegible] Mr. Parnell [illegible] Mr. Gladstone

Washington, D. C., Aug. 26.—[Special.]—Among the new forms adopted at the Treasury for use under trade contracts to secure to the advantage of the Government the full and honest performance of the contract, is one requiring the bonded guarantor to declare that he is worth double the amount of the bond, over and above his debts and liabilities, and that he has property to that amount subject to execution. It is believed that the new form will be found to be a protection to the Government against the failure of bondsmen, who, when the contractor fails to perform his contract, are found to be worthless. Another new form now in use requires the bonded guarantor to make oath to the fact that he has not and will not release, directly or indirectly, any of the property upon which he has a lien as security for the faithful performance of the contract. This is to prevent the contractor from selling out his property and leaving the bondsmen without security. IN GENERAL.

A man who is supposed to be William Martin, an engraver of Mount Rose, Tennessee, district is lost, his and the Free Baptist society, and after the services would leave the church to the second floor, and another service would be held in the basement. Martin would then go to Brooklyn, Ill., but keep moving to the north, and it is supposed was drunk when he left.

At the meeting of the Switchmen's Union yesterday afternoon the Chairman of the Executive Committee reported that the entire local organization would go to work and that the switchmen would work from the fourth to the second floor, and another service would be held in the basement. The agreement to the Union is accepted, and it is supposed was drunk when he left.

About fifty men and yesterday afternoon to a hall in the rooms of Knights and Ladies of Honor to decide whether they were Lodge No. 1,000 of the Knights of Labor or Lodge No. 10 of the Engineers' Union. They voted that they have nothing to do with the Knights of Labor, and declared their adhesion to the Engineers' Union.

It was reported at the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Chicago Trades Assembly that the Switchmen Engineers, which now had a meeting afternoon in the Trades Assembly Hall, requesting an Assembly charter, had been organized with about seventy members, and that they would be out of that room within a few days. The Engineers of Lodge No. 10 have been ordered to the Assembly Hall, and will hereafter meet there.

The Engineers of Lodge No. 1,000 have ordered the switchmen to leave the Assembly Hall, and when the latter refused to do so they left the hall themselves. The switchmen have now taken possession of the hall, and have changed the lock on the door. The Engineers of Lodge No. 1,000 have withdrawn from the Assembly, and have applied for a charter from the Knights of Labor. They have also applied to the Assembly for the return of the charter granted to Lodge No. 10, which has changed from the Engineers' Union to the Knights of Labor.

BAVARIA'S CRAZY KING.

The Royal Maniac for Borrowing Money of Everybody and Building Castles Everywhere.

A Financial Crash Imminent, Which Is All Probability Will Be Immediately Followed

By the Demolition of the Romantic Residence of His Feline Ally Illuminati.

Berlin Correspondence New York World: No sooner has the accumulation of King Ludwig of Bavaria been terminated a possible basis for outrageous extension and poverty and court gossip. But so long as these questionable deeds of a baronial character are not connected with Crown the people in beautiful places are content unless the taxes of them. Recently, however, matters have assumed a graver aspect. King Ludwig has entered into theatrical and operatic performances for his private pleasure, the cost occupying his royal mouse to the tune of pre-extensive castle buildings in such a manner that on the various crests, cathedrals & enhanced and a financial catastrophe is expected as inevitable. The King's extravagance, though largely devoted to his pleasure, are so deeply impressing on good feelings, and the foundations of the "Grand monarch" is greatly upsetting at in the European capital. The Bavarian people, though in prominent terms, that is a fact undeniable.

King Ludwig, if he is allowed to continue, will succeed in transforming his country into a desert. The fields and grasslands of the Alpine provinces are gathering moss, and the peasantry, unable to pay their taxes, are emigrating to America in large numbers. Even the cities are not safe from the royal mania, as evidenced by the Bavarian King's recent hair-raising scheme for diverting the course of the Isar river, so as to bring a branch of that stream through the center of Munich. The project, which involves the expenditure of many millions of dollars, was fortunately abandoned after three days' work had been done, and the money appropriated for the purpose had been squandered.

It is now proposed to build a new capital for Bavaria, to be called Ludwigsburg, in honor of the King, and the establishment of a republic in that country is considered not far off. The people here, and in the old capital, Munich itself, are heavily taxed to pay for the follies of their sovereign, who is known as the Crazy King.

EYE SIGHT.

Upon my word and honor,
I have not eyes like those
Which look through and through me,
And make me quail and cower,
Which pierce my very soul,
As though they were not there,
And read my every thought,
And all my secret care.

I cannot say how beautiful
Or bright they are to me,
I cannot tell the perfect shape
Or color they may be,
Enough that they are eyes
That look through mine to mine,
And kindle me right well.

I cannot paint those eyes,
Words are but empty sounds,
Yet I can tell how tender
And true they are to me,
How like the stars at night
They look on me and smile,
How sweet and gentle
Was you to me.

What does an eye mean
That does not look into
The soul of the one it looks on
And make it its own?
What is an eye for
But to look love to life?
Then you to me are eyes.
